

Gasoline Prices

Do you know why the price of High Test Gasoline is 21 cents per gallon in Columbia and 25 and 26 in all other towns in Missouri? The reason is plain. At near the Katy tracks, there is buried twelve feet under the street a tank holding TEN THOUSAND FIVE HUNDRED GALLONS of High Test Gas, syphoned in, in car lots, from the Katy tracks. The saving in teams, wagons, wages and maintaining offices make up the saving that Columbia patrons get through this big filling station. If this big filling station was not here, Columbia would pay the same for her Gas as do other places.

The people of the community are patronizing this station very largely for several reasons—they not only get better gas at a smaller price per gallon and per mile, but the station is all a Columbia concern, paying taxes and building streets to the extent that the citizenship feels a partnership interest in this particular concern.
